

Carol Kozeracki is the Dean of Research, Planning, and Enrollment Management at Pierce College in Los Angeles. She earned her BA in English and Philosophy from Fordham University in New York, and a master's degree and PhD in higher education from UCLA. Her dissertation focused on the professional development of English faculty who teach basic skills courses. For five years, she served as the Assistant Director of the ERIC Clearinghouse for Community Colleges, a federally funded agency that compiled and abstracted reports and studies related to community colleges into an online database. She has worked in the institutional research office at Santa Monica College, UCLA, and Pierce College. She is a member of the Research and Planning Group and the Council for the Study of Community Colleges. Carol also teaches a college success course for community college students and a graduate level course in higher education administration.
