• analyze the balance of theory, law, policy, and practice as they relate to juvenile delinquency.
• demonstrate an understanding of the various treatment approaches utilized to curb the onset of delinquency.
• review public policy as it relates to the well-being of children and families.

ADMJ 315 Pathway To Public Safety Careers

This course is designed for students who are pursuing careers in public safety services. Topics of this course include the history, structure, purpose, and function of federal, state and local government services, as well as characteristics and function of careers that provide services for the well-being and safety to the public. This course examines the values and mission employed by public agencies, and also explores the complex relationship between communities and the institutions and agencies charged with their governance. Lastly, this course provides an overview of the complexity and thoroughness of the pre-employment testing processes involved in testing for jobs in public safety assignments. Emphasis is placed on career readiness, employment and career search techniques, application processes, pre-employment testing, interviews, background investigations, and conditional job offers.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

• identify the history, structure, and function of federal, state, and local government public safety and judicial careers.
• examine the contemporary purpose, structure, and function of federal, state, and local government public safety and judicial careers.
• analyze how community perceptions of public safety agencies and systems have been shaped by the relations between the system and different cultural groups within the community (e.g., social class, race, gender, religion, disability, sexual orientation, age, etc.).
• appraise the changing public safety workforce within the workforce of personnel who have taken an oath to provide safety to the community they serve.
• apply ethical standards both personally and professionally.
• comprehend the complexity and thoroughness of the pre-employment background investigation process, and identify potential career disqualifiers.
• identify the written, physical, medical, psychological, and practical pre-employment testing associated with the various public safety pathways.
• write reports in a clear and logical manner.
• examine career pathway options in the field of public safety services.

ADMJ 320 Concepts of Criminal Law

This course is designed to examine at-risk and delinquent juvenile behaviors from a variety of historical and contemporary perspectives. This course examines the concept of delinquency, theories of childhood development, social, community, and environmental influences on children. An overview of adolescent problems and current approaches being utilized to confront these problems will also be discussed. Specifically, this course analyzes the nature and extent of delinquency with relation to gender differences, family dynamics, peer and gang groups, schools, drug use, and the juvenile justice courts.
This course examines the philosophy and structure of criminal law in the United States. Special emphasis is placed on the classification of crime, the general elements of crime, the definitions of common and statutory law, and the nature of acceptable evidence. This course utilizes case studies to introduce students to criminal law and the classification of crimes against persons, property, morals, and public welfare. It also includes discussion of prosecution and defense decision making, criminal culpability, and defenses of crimes. ADMJ480 is the "honors" equivalent of ADMJ320. Students eligible for the Honors Program may elect to take ADMJ480 instead of ADMJ320. Because of the close similarity of the courses credit may be earned for ADMJ320 or for ADMJ480 but not for both.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- research the philosophical and historical evolution of criminal law.
- examine the adversary system and sources of criminal law.
- identify elements of offenses against the person, property, morals, and public welfare.
- analyze a criminal court case and identify elements of the offenses and criminal defenses applicable to that case.
- classify crimes according to severity.
- interpret the capacity to commit crime, causation, and culpability.
- examine the effects of ethical conduct of government officials and the relationship to the enforcement of criminal laws.

ADMJ 321 Substantive Criminal Law

- assess, analyze, and apply sociological and criminological theories of crime and deviance.
- understand the social construction of crime, deviance, and social categories of offenses.
- evaluate and assess how social stratification can impact experiences within the criminal justice system and our ability to shape them.

ADMJ 480 Concepts of Criminal Law - Honors

This course examines the philosophy and structure of criminal law in the United States. Special emphasis is placed on the classification of crime, the general elements of crime, the definitions of common and statutory law, and the nature of acceptable evidence. This course utilizes case studies to introduce students to criminal law and the classification of crimes against persons, property, morals, and public welfare. It also includes discussion of prosecution and defense decision making, criminal culpability, and defenses of crimes. Honors courses are open to students who demonstrate an ability to write carefully reasoned, well-organized essays of varying lengths, are prepared to make clear oral presentations in class, and are able to actively contribute to seminar discussions. Credit may be earned for ADMJ 480 or ADMJ 320 but not for both.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- research the philosophical and historical evolution of criminal law.
- appraise the adversary system and sources of criminal law.
- identify elements of offenses against the person, property, morals, and public welfare.
- analyze a criminal court case and identify elements of the offenses and criminal defenses applicable to that case.
- classify crimes according to severity.
- interpret the capacity to commit crime, causation, and culpability.
- examine the effects of ethical conduct of government officials and the relationship to the enforcement of criminal laws.

ADMJ 494 Topics in Administration of Justice
This course is designed to examine current problems or specific topics pertaining to the administration of justice field. Particular subjects to be covered each semester will be determined by faculty from within the administration of justice department.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- analyze contemporary issues in the field of administration of justice.
- integrate new data into a better understanding of current administration of justice issues.
- examine current interest topics in administration of justice.
- develop skills and knowledge in the area of the title of the segment being offered.

ADMJ 495 Independent Studies in Administration of Justice

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify an area of interest and design a plan of activities to gain knowledge or skills in that area.
- independently follow a proposed plan of study from the design stage to completion.
- evaluate and reflect on personal skills, abilities, and knowledge.

ADMJ 498 Work Experience in Administration of Justice

This course is designed to provide students with effective job development skills that will assist them in obtaining and keeping an internship or a job in the student’s major area. Course content will include understanding the application of education to the workforce; the responsibilities of an internship (where applicable) or a job; completion of Title V Education Code papers (the student’s Application, Learning Objectives, Time sheet, and Evaluations), which document the student’s progress and hours spent at the workplace or internship site; and developing workplace (soft) skills relevant to the 21st century workplace. In addition, the student is required to fulfill 18 hours lecture and 75 hours of related, paid work experience or 60 hours of related work experience for one unit; 75 or 60 hours of related work experience for each additional unit. The program allows the student to combine practical, paid or non-paid work experience with college training. The course may be taken up to four times when there is new or expanded learning on the job for up to 16 units. In addition, the student and the Work Experience instructor may tailor the course to meet the student’s specific professional needs by identifying 1-4 workshops, trainings, or conferences that the student may attend as part of the curriculum of the ADMJ 498 class. Only one Work Experience course may be taken per semester.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- apply classroom study through application of planned, supervised on-the-job experience.
- develop practical workplace (soft) skills, acquire knowledge, and build confidence in the workplace.
- evaluate themselves in the following career and life planning process: self-awareness; career awareness; decision making and goal setting; job search and workplace success; balanced lifestyle.
