Associate Degrees for Transfer

A.A.-T. in History

The history major fosters an understanding of ourselves and our world through the study of the remote and recent past. The program develops critical thinking through exposure to a variety of historical themes, analysis and evaluation of evidence, and different points of view. Completion of the major prepares students for transfer to B.A. programs in history and for graduate studies in history leading to the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. It also equips students for careers in business, government, teaching, law, or journalism. The Associate in Arts in History for Transfer (AA-T) prepares students for seamless transfer into the CSU system to complete a baccalaureate in History or related field.

The Associate Degree for Transfer (ADT) student completion requirements (as stated in SB1440 law):

1. Completion of a minimum of 60 semester units or 90 quarter units that are eligible for transfer to the California State University, including both of the following:
   (A) The Intersegmental GE Transfer Curriculum (IGETC) or the California State University GE-Breadth Requirements (CSU GE-Breadth).
   (B) A minimum of 18 semester units or 27 quarter units in a major or area of emphasis, as determined by the community college district.
2. Obtainment of a minimum grade point average of 2.0.

ADTs also require that students must earn a "C" or better in all courses required for the major or area of emphasis.

HIST 373 History of Mexico

This general survey of Mexican history introduces the cultural, economic, political, and social factors that have shaped Mexico from the pre-Columbian era to the present. Topics of study include pre-Columbian civilizations such as the Olmecs, Maya, and Aztecs and their cultural contributions through architecture and fine arts, the Spanish conquest, colonial New Spain, race, class, and gender in Mexican society, wars of independence and nation building, foreign invasions by the United States and France, the age of Porfirio Diaz, the Revolution of 1910, the modernization of Mexico, and U.S.-Mexico relations.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in Mexican history from the pre-Columbian era to the present. (ProLo 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about Mexican history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct oral and written historical arguments. (ProLo 3)
- evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in Mexican history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLo 1)
- demonstrate an understanding of the interconnectedness between Mexican, continental, and global history to foster active civic engagement. (ProLo 2)
- apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues. (ProLos 2, 3, 4)
- collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret complex material. (ProLos 1, 2, 3, 4)

HIST 375 The History of Modern Latin America and Caribbean

This course offers a general survey of Latin America and Caribbean history from the 19th century to the present, with focus on social, political, economic, and cultural developments. Course themes include the complex and gradual process of nation building, the region’s incorporation into the global economy, the impact this has had on development and consequential nationalistic re-assertions, the way in which notions of race, class, and gender have informed these processes; the politics of populism, revolution, dictatorship and democracy; and the complex relationship Latin America and the Caribbean share with the United States.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in Latin America and Caribbean history since Independence (ProLo 4).
- generate significant open-ended questions about Latin America and Caribbean history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing (ProLo 3).
- evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in Latin America and Caribbean history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances (ProLo 1).
- analyze Latin America and Caribbean societies in a comparative context to understand the historical construction of differences and similarities (e.g. race, class, gender, etc.) among groups and regions (ProLos 1, 2).
- apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues (ProLos 2, 3, 4).
- collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret complex material (ProLos 1, 2, 3, 4).

HIST 380 History of the Middle East

This course surveys the history of the Middle East (Southwest Asia) and North Africa with emphasis on the period from the 6th century CE (AD) to the present. The course focuses on the major social, economic, political, and cultural transformations of the region, while taking into account both regional and global contexts of interaction and change in a comparative format. This course will provide students with a historical understanding of the impact of European colonialism, the discovery of petroleum and its consequences, the Palestinian-Israeli conflict, and the role played by the United States in the region.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate breadth of knowledge of important social, economic, cultural, political, and intellectual currents in the History of Southwest Asia and North Africa (SWANA) from later antiquity to the present. (ProLo 1)
● analyze the history and society of SWANA in a comparative context, understand the historical construction of differences and similarities among groups and regions (e.g. race, class, gender, nation and ethnicity), and recognize the contributions and interactions of such groups to SWANA history. (ProLO 2)

● generate meaningful open-ended questions about the SWANA past and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and in writing, employing critical thinking skills that include comparative analysis. (ProLO 3)

● compare, examine, and understand the historical interactions of people in SWANA with peoples and cultures in other parts of Africa, Asia, and Europe through global trade and communication networks, and demonstrate an understanding of distinct local, regional, and global experiences and their interconnectedness in order to engage responsibly in the world. (ProLO 4)

● examine the role of the global economy, natural resources, and geopolitical considerations on the development of the modern SWANA region and its peoples. (ProLOs 1, 2, 3, & 4)

HIST 381 Modern Palestinian History and Culture

Units: 3
Hours: 54 hours LEC
Prerequisite: None.
Advisory: Eligibility for ENGWR 300, ENGWR 108, or ESLW 340, or placement through the assessment process.
Transferable: CSU; UC
General Education: AA/AS Area V(b); AA/AS Area VI; CSU Area D; IGETC Area 4
Catalog Date: June 1, 2020

This course is an introduction to modern Palestinian history and culture. After establishing the ancient historical context of Palestine at the crossroads of Asia, Africa, and the Mediterranean and as an early center of agriculture and civilization, this course focuses mainly on 16th century Ottoman rule to the present. The course covers the impacts of Ottoman rule, the pressures of British and French imperialism, the British Mandate over Palestine, the establishment of the state of Israel, and current Palestinian realities. Palestine’s social and cultural diversity, as well as its place in the imagination of people and movements outside the region, is an important part of its history.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

● demonstrate breadth of knowledge of important social, economic, cultural, political, and intellectual currents in modern Palestinian history and culture while recognizing the continuum between past and present. (ProLO 1)

● evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in modern Palestinian history and culture through an examination of a variety of sources and experiences, including conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLO 2)

● generate meaningful open-ended questions about the Palestinian past, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and in writing, and recognize the contested nature of historical narratives. (ProLO 3)

● recognize the various contending and conflicting regional and global forces on Palestinian society and demonstrate their connections to local, national, and regional developments, and compare Palestinian experiences of those forces with those of other groups in Asia, Africa, and the Americas. (ProLO 4)

● examine the role of Palestinian history and culture in its local, regional, and global contexts, including points of contact or interconnectedness with social justice struggles which call for engaging responsibly in the world. (ProLO 4)

This course surveys the history of the United States by examining its Native American, European, and African backgrounds, beginning with Indigenous peoples before 1492 and ending with the collapse of Reconstruction in 1877. This course emphasizes the roles played by cultural, economic, intellectual, political, and social institutions in American history, with an eye toward understanding the history of multiple ethnic groups in a comparative framework. The class is conducted in a seminar format and uses an intensive instructional methodology that is designed to challenge motivated students. Because of the similarity of the courses, credit may be earned for only one of the following courses: History 310, 320, 483, or 486.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

● identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history to 1877. (ProLO 4)

● generate significant open-ended questions about United States history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing. (ProLO 3)

● evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in United States history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLO 1)

● demonstrate an understanding of the inter-connectedness between United States history and global history to foster active civic engagement.

● apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues. (ProLOs 2, 3, 4)

● collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret complex material. (ProLOs 1, 2, 3, 4)

- demonstrate an understanding of U.S. History through current analytical categories of race, class, gender, and ethnicity.
- demonstrate an understanding of America's growth in a global context.
- explain the major historical, technological, and scientific developments and their historical significance.
This course covers the development of American Institutions and society from Reconstruction to the present and partially fulfills American Institutions requirements for California State University and the University of California. The course emphasizes the role played by political, economic, cultural, and intellectual forces in American society and the development of multiple ethnic groups in a comparative format. Beginning with a review of the Civil War, HIST 487 closely examines the Reconstruction Era, the societal “place” of African Americans, the development of “Jim Crow” segregation, and the subsequent legal demise of segregation in American life. This course pays close attention to the ways in which African American people have subsequently shaped and contributed to American society, culture, and politics. Credit may be earned for HIST 487 or HIST 321, but not both.

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history from 1865 to the present. (ProLo 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about United States history and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing. (ProLo 3)

HIST 494 Topics in History

The content of this course will differ each time the course is offered. The objective is to examine various issues of historical significance. U.C. transfer credit will be awarded only after the course has been evaluated by the enrolling U.C. campus. The units completed for this course cannot be counted toward the minimum 60 units required for admission.

HIST 495 Independent Studies in History

An independent studies project involves an individual student or a small group of students who wish to study, research, and/or pursue historical topics beyond those covered in regularly offered courses. This course will allow students to study specific topics and gain new perspectives in the discipline. U.C. transfer credit will be awarded only after the course has been evaluated by the enrolling U.C. campus. The units completed for this course cannot be counted toward the minimum 60 units required for admission.

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- develop and pursue a research agenda on an historical topic or set of historical topics.
- demonstrate the ability to recognize and interpret multiple forms of evidence such as visual images, oral accounts, statistical records, and artifacts from material culture.
- critically analyze and assess historical evidence upon which different explanations and interpretations of historical phenomena are founded.
- explain how socially constructed categories (such as race, class and gender) can be analyzed to explain historical phenomena.
- identify and explain the sequence of cause and effect of historical phenomena.
