The history major fosters an understanding of ourselves and our world through the study of the remote and recent past. The program develops critical thinking through exposure to a variety of historical themes, analysis and evaluation of evidence, and different points of view. The major prepares students for transfer to B.A. programs in history. It also equips students for careers in business, government, teaching, law, or journalism.

Career Options

This major prepares students for transfer to B.A. programs in history. It also equips students for careers in business, government, teaching, law, or journalism.

Associate Degrees for Transfer

A.A.-T. in History

The history major fosters an understanding of ourselves and our world through the study of the remote and recent past. The program develops critical thinking through exposure to a variety of historical themes, analysis and evaluation of evidence, and different points of view. Completion of the major prepares students for transfer to B.A. programs in history and for graduate studies in history leading to the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees. It also equips students for careers in business, government, teaching, law, or journalism. The Associate in Arts in History for Transfer (AA-T) prepares students for seamless transfer into the CSU system to complete a baccalaureate in History or related field.

The Associate Degree for Transfer (ADT) student completion requirements (as stated in SB1440 law):

1. Completion of a minimum of 60 semester units or 90 quarter units that are eligible for transfer to the California State University, including both of the following:
   - The Intersegmental GE Transfer Curriculum (IGETC) or the California State University GE-Breadth Requirements (CSU GE-Breadth).
   - A minimum of 18 semester units or 27 quarter units in a major or area of emphasis, as determined by the community college district.
2. Obtainment of a minimum grade point average of 2.0.

ADTs also require that students must earn a “C” or better in all courses required for the major or area of emphasis.

The Associate in Arts in History for Transfer (AA-T) degree may be obtained by completion of 60 transferable, semester units with a minimum 2.0 GPA, including (a) the major or area of emphasis described in the Required Program, and (b) either the Intersegmental General Education Transfer Curriculum (IGETC) or the California State University General Education-Breadth Requirements.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this program, the student will be able to:

- evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances.
- demonstrate an understanding of distinct local, regional, and global experiences and their interconnectedness to foster active civic engagement.
- generate significant open-ended questions about the past, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct oral and written historical arguments.
- demonstrate breadth of knowledge of important social, economic, cultural, political, and intellectual currents while recognizing the continuum between the past and present.
A.A. in History

The history major fosters an understanding of ourselves and our world through the study of the remote and recent past. The program develops critical thinking through exposure to a variety of historical themes, analysis and evaluation of evidence, and different points of view. The major prepares students for transfer to B.A. programs in history. It also equips students for careers in business, government, teaching, law, or journalism.

Transfer Program: Transfer students should consult the Transfer Information section in this catalog and the History or related major sections of the catalog for the specific institution to which they wish to transfer to determine admissions, general education, and major requirements. Consultation with an SCC counselor is advised.

HIST 314 Recent United States History

| Units: | 3 |
This course covers United States history from 1945 to the present, offering an in-depth study of post-World War II United States history. The course emphasizes the role played by political, economic, social, cultural, and intellectual forces in shaping the American past and leading to present society. A major focus is the culture and development of multiple ethnic groups in a comparative format. Credit may be earned for HIST 314 or HIST 485, but not both.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history since 1945 (ProLo 4).
- generate significant open-ended questions about United States history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing (ProLo 3).
- evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in United States history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances (ProLo 1).
- demonstrate an understanding of the interconnectedness between United States history and global history to foster active citizenship (ProLos 1, 2).
- apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues (ProLos 2, 3, 4).
- collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret complex material (ProLos 1, 2, 3, 4).

HIST 320 History of the United States: African-American Emphasis

This course covers the development of American Institutions and society through Reconstruction and fulfills American Institutions requirements for California State University and the University of California. The course emphasizes the role played by political, economic, cultural, and intellectual forces in American society and the development of multiple ethnic groups.
ethnic groups in a comparative format. Beginning on the African Continent, this course will also examine the origins of the Atlantic Slave Trade and its implications for North American labor systems, including slavery. The course pays particular attention to the ways in which black people have influenced the formation and development of this nation; and examines the ways in which racial issues have shaped American society, culture, and politics. Credit may be earned for HIST 320 or HIST 486, but not both.

HIST 327 History of the Chicano/Mexican American

This course examines the history of Chicanos/Mexican Americans in North America. It explores pre-Columbian civilizations and the experiences of Chicanos/Mexican Americans within the United States from the colonial period to the present. This course investigates the social, political, economic, legal, and cultural experiences of Chicanos/Mexican Americans and their contributions to American institutions.

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history as experienced by Chicanos/Mexican Americans. (ProLo 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about Chicanos/Mexican Americans in U.S. history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct oral and written historical arguments. (ProLo 3)
- evaluate and analyze the diverse experiences and perspectives of Chicanos/Mexican Americans in relation to multiple ethnic groups in United States history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLo 1)
HIST 344 Survey of California History: A Multicultural Perspective

This course is a survey of the history of California with an emphasis on the evolution of the state as a multicultural society, beginning with Native Californian cultures prior to contact with Europeans and continuing to the present. Above all, the course examines, compares, and evaluates the historical experiences of Native Californian, Spanish, Mexican, Asian, African American, European American, and other cultural groups and the role the dynamic interaction of those groups has played in creating contemporary realities in California. Field trips to local sites of historical significance may be included.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in California history. (ProLo 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about United States history and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing. (ProLo 3)
- demonstrate an understanding of the inter-connectedness between California history, US history, and global history to foster active citizenship. (ProLo 2)
- collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret historical material. (ProLOs 1, 2, 3, 4)
- evaluate and analyze the diverse experiences and perspectives of multiple ethnic groups in California history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLO 1)
- identify and analyze the historical origins and evolution of California’s multicultural society. (ProLOs 1, 2)
- identify and analyze the contributions of diverse cultural groups to the historical evolution of California society. (ProLOs 1, 2)
- examine the origins and development of California’s constitution, including the constitutional revision in 1878, and Progressive Era reforms in the early 20th century (especially the nonpartisan ballot, and the initiative, referendum, and recall process). (ProLOs 2, 4)
This course is an introductory survey of African history from prehistory to the present. Major topics will include the rise of societies and states in Africa to 1500 CE, the introduction of Christianity and Islam, the Atlantic slave trade, European colonialism, and the emergence of nation states in modern Africa. The course examines the development of social, political, and economic institutions in Africa, the interactions of peoples and cultures, and Africa's place in global history.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate breadth of knowledge of the major historical events and forces in African History. (ProLo 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about the African past, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and in writing. (ProLo 3)
- incorporate and synthesize an understanding of indigenous political, social, and religious institutions in the study of African history. (ProLos 1 and 4)
- assess and analyze African participation and engagement in global trends and developments as well as the impact of outside influences on Africa. (ProLo 2)
- evaluate and analyze the importance of the diversity of experience and perspectives in African History with an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLo 1)
- demonstrate an understanding of the connection between the African past and the African present to engage responsibly in the world. (ProLo 2)
This course surveys Asian civilizations to 1600 with an emphasis on East Asia and South Asia. The course focuses on the major social, cultural, economic, and political transformations of Asia, particularly highlighting the influence of these peoples and states on each other and the world. The course will provide students with a historical understanding of topics such as: the rise of complex societies, states, and empires across Asia; the relationship between settlement-based civilizations and the herding civilizations of Central Asia; the emergence of various philosophies, religions, and identities across Asia; Asian technology and innovations; the impact of the Mongol Empire; and the changing relationship of Asia to the wider world.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate breadth of knowledge of important social, economic, cultural, political, and intellectual currents in Asian history through 1600. (ProLO 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about Asian history through 1600, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and in writing. (ProLO 3)

HIST 373 History of Mexico

This general survey of Mexican history introduces the cultural, economic, political, and social factors that have shaped Mexico from the pre-Columbian era to the present. Topics of study include pre-Columbian civilizations such as the Olmecs, Maya, and Aztecs and their cultural contributions through architecture and fine arts, the Spanish conquest, colonial New Spain, race, class, and gender in Mexican society, wars of independence and nation building, foreign invasions by the United States and France, the age of Porfirio Diaz, the Revolution of 1910, the modernization of Mexico, and U.S.-Mexico relations.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in Mexican history from the pre-Columbian era to the present. (ProLo 4)
• generate significant open-ended questions about Mexican history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct oral and written historical arguments. (ProLo 3)

• evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in Mexican history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLo 1)

• demonstrate an understanding of the interconnectedness between Mexican, continental, and global history to foster active civic engagement. (ProLo 2)

• apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues. (ProLos 2, 3, 4)

• collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret complex material. (ProLos 1, 2, 3, 4)

HIST 375 The History of Modern Latin America and Caribbean

Units: 3
Hours: 54 hours LEC
Prerequisite: None.
Advisory: Eligibility for ENGWR 300, ENGWR 108, or ESLW 340, or placement through the assessment process.
Transferable: CSU; UC
General Education: AA/AS Area V(b); AA/AS Area VI; CSU Area C2; CSU Area D6; IGETC Area 3B; IGETC Area 4F
Catalog Date: January 1, 2020

This course offers a general survey of Latin America and Caribbean history from the 19th century to the present, with focus on social, political, economic, and cultural developments. Course themes include the complex and gradual process of nation building, the region's incorporation into the global economy, the impact this has had on development and consequential nationalistic re-assertions, the way in which notions of race, class, and gender have informed these processes; the politics of populism, revolution, dictatorship and democracy; and the complex relationship Latin America and the Caribbean share with the United States.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

• identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in Latin America and Caribbean history since Independence (ProLo 4).

• generate significant open-ended questions about Latin America and Caribbean history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing (ProLo 3).

• evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in Latin America and Caribbean history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances (ProLo 1).

• analyze Latin America and Caribbean societies in a comparative context to understand the historical construction of differences and similarities (e.g. race, class, gender, etc.) among groups and regions (ProLos 1, 2).

• apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues (ProLos 2, 3, 4).
HIST 380 History of the Middle East

Units: 3
Hours: 54 hours LEC
Prerequisite: None.
Advisory: Eligibility for ENGWR 300, ENGWR 108, or ESLW 340, or placement through the assessment process.
Transferable: CSU; UC
General Education: AA/AS Area V(b); AA/AS Area I; AA/AS Area VI; CSU Area C2; CSU Area D6; IGETC Area 3B; IGETC Area 4F
Catalog Date: January 1, 2020

This course surveys the history of the Middle East (Southwest Asia) and North Africa with emphasis on the period from the 6th century CE (AD) to the present. The course focuses on the major social, economic, political, and cultural transformations of the region, while taking into account both regional and global contexts of interaction and change in a comparative format. This course will provide students with a historical understanding of the impact of European colonialism, the discovery of petroleum and its consequences, the Palestinian-Israeli conflict, and the role played by the United States in the region.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate breadth of knowledge of important social, economic, cultural, political, and intellectual currents in the History of Southwest Asia and North Africa (SWANA) from later antiquity to the present. (ProLO 1)

- analyze the history and society of SWANA in a comparative context, understand the historical construction of differences and similarities among groups and regions (e.g. race, class, gender, nation and ethnicity), and recognize the contributions and interactions of such groups to SWANA history. (ProLO 2)

- generate meaningful open-ended questions about the SWANA past and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and in writing, employing critical thinking skills that include comparative analysis. (ProLO 3)

- compare, examine, and understand the historical interactions of people in SWANA with peoples and cultures in other parts of Africa, Asia, and Europe through global trade and communication networks, and demonstrate an understanding of distinct local, regional, and global experiences and their interconnectedness in order to engage responsibly in the world. (ProLO 4)

- examine the role of the global economy, natural resources, and geopolitical considerations on the development of the modern SWANA region and its peoples. (ProLOs 1, 2, 3, &4)
This course is an introduction to modern Palestinian history and culture. After establishing the ancient historical context of Palestine at the crossroads of Asia, Africa, and the Mediterranean and as an early center of agriculture and civilization, this course focuses mainly on 16th century Ottoman rule to the present. The course covers the impacts of Ottoman rule, the pressures of British and French imperialism, the British Mandate over Palestine, the establishment of the state of Israel, and current Palestinian realities. Palestine's social and cultural diversity, as well as its place in the imagination of people and movements outside the region, is an important part of its history.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- demonstrate breadth of knowledge of important social, economic, cultural, political, and intellectual currents in modern Palestinian history and culture while recognizing the continuum between past and present. (ProLO 1)

- evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in modern Palestinian history and culture through an examination of a variety of sources and experiences, including conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLO 2)

- generate meaningful open-ended questions about the Palestinian past, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and in writing, and recognize the contested nature of historical narratives. (ProLO 3)

- recognize the various contending and conflicting regional and global forces on Palestinian society and demonstrate their connections to local, national, and regional developments, and compare Palestinian experiences of those forces with those of other groups in Asia, Africa, and the Americas. (ProLO 4)

- examine the role of Palestinian history and culture in its local, regional, and global contexts, including points of contact or interconnectedness with social justice struggles which call for engaging responsibly in the world. (ProLO 4)
This course surveys the history of the United States by examining its Native American, European, and African backgrounds, beginning with Indigenous peoples before 1492 and ending with the collapse of Reconstruction in 1877. This course emphasizes the roles played by cultural, economic, intellectual, political, and social institutions in American history, with an eye toward understanding the history of multiple ethnic groups in a comparative framework. The class is conducted in a seminar format and uses an intensive instructional methodology that is designed to challenge motivated students. Because of the similarity of the courses, credit may be earned for only one of the following courses: History 310, 320, 483, or 486.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history to 1877. (ProLO 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about United States history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing. (ProLO 3)
- evaluate and analyze diverse experiences and perspectives in United States history through an examination of conflicting narratives and power imbalances. (ProLO 1)
- demonstrate an understanding of the inter-connectedness between United States history and global history to foster active civic engagement.
- apply historical knowledge and historical thinking to contemporary issues. (ProLOs 2, 3, 4)
- collect, sift, organize, question, synthesize, and interpret complex material. (ProLOs 1, 2, 3, 4)

HIST 485 Recent United States History - Honors

This course is an introduction to the study of American history from 1945 to the present day. It is a seminar-style honors course that uses an intensive instructional methodology designed to challenge motivated students and cultivate advanced critical thinking skills. Particular emphasis will be placed on the role played by complex interrelationships of political, economic, social, and cultural forces in United States history after World War II, and the role played by multiple ethnic groups as well. This course is not open to students who have completed HIST 314.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history since 1945 (ProLo 4).
This course covers the development of American Institutions and society through Reconstruction and partially fulfills American Institutions requirements for California State University and the University of California. The course emphasizes the role played by political, economic, cultural, and intellectual forces in American society and the development of multiple ethnic groups in a comparative format. Beginning on the African Continent, this course will also examine the origins of the Atlantic Slave Trade and its implications for North American labor systems, including slavery. The course pays particular attention to the ways in which black people have influenced the formation and development of this nation; and examine the ways in which racial issues have shaped American society, culture, and politics. The class is conducted in a seminar format and uses intensive instructional methodology that is designed to challenge motivated students. Credit may be earned for HIST 320 or HIST 486, but not both.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- identify, explain, and evaluate the major historical forces in United States history through Reconstruction. (ProLo 4)
- generate significant open-ended questions about United States history, and critically analyze primary and secondary sources to construct historical arguments orally and/or in writing. (ProLo 3)

- Advisory: Eligibility for ENGWR 300, ENGWR 108, or ESLW 340, or placement through the assessment process.
- Transferable: CSU
- Catalog Date: January 1, 2020

The content of this course will differ each time the course is offered. The objective is to examine various issues of historical significance. U.C. transfer credit will be awarded only after the course has been evaluated by the enrolling U.C. campus. The units completed for this course cannot be counted toward the minimum 60 units required for admission.

HIST 495 Independent Studies in History

- Units: 1 - 3
- Hours: 54 - 162 hours LAB
- Prerequisite: None.
- Advisory: Eligibility for ENGWR 300, ENGWR 108, or ESLW 340, or placement through the assessment process.
- Transferable: CSU
- Catalog Date: January 1, 2020

An independent studies project involves an individual student or a small group of students who wish to study, research, and/or pursue historical topics beyond those covered in regularly offered courses. This course will allow students to study specific topics and gain new perspectives in the discipline. U.C. transfer credit will be awarded only after the course has been evaluated by the enrolling U.C. campus. The units completed for this course cannot be counted toward the minimum 60 units required for admission.

Student Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- develop and pursue a research agenda on an historical topic or set of historical topics.
- demonstrate the ability to recognize and interpret multiple forms of evidence such as visual images, oral accounts, statistical records, and artifacts from material culture.
- critically analyze and assess historical evidence upon which different explanations and interpretations of historical phenomena are founded.
- explain how socially constructed categories (such as race, class and gender) can be analyzed to explain historical phenomena.
- identify and explain the sequence of cause and effect of historical phenomena.
